BOISE'S CARNEGIE LIBRARY BUILDING GAINS NEW PURPOSE WITH EDNETICS
The iconic property will house technology company and support arts and education

POST FALLS, Idaho – (May 17, 2019) – Idaho entrepreneur and Ednetics founder Shawn Swanby today announced the purchase of the Carnegie Library Building in downtown Boise. Ednetics, an Idaho-based provider of advanced technology solutions for K12, libraries, higher education and government across the western United States, will be the primary tenant.

Swanby purchased the iconic property from previous owner St. Michael's Episcopal Cathedral. Ednetics will use a portion of the space to anchor operations for the western US while Shawn and his wife, Sarah Swanby, explore ways that the Carnegie Library property can support education and the arts.

"We have an opportunity to reinterpret the purpose of this building," said Sarah Swanby. "The Columbian Club of Boise knew what the Library would mean for the community when they secured the Library grant from Andrew Carnegie. We want to honor that contribution by reestablishing a community aspect to the property."

The Swanbys have retained the building's original architecture firm, Hummel Architects, to lead renovations and have recently selected HC Company of Boise to act as general contractor. The project team will spend the remainder of 2019 in architectural and engineering planning and coordination with local agencies.

"There is an obvious synergy between the original plan for this building – for it to be a place for learning, connection and community – and the purpose of Ednetics," said Shawn Swanby, Ednetics CEO. "We're energized by the opportunity to faithfully reimagine this historic space to empower innovation in education and government."

Founded in 1997, Ednetics is headquartered in Post Falls, Idaho and has expanded to include regional offices in Boise, Seattle, Portland, Phoenix and Los Angeles.

Shawn Swanby, who is a southwest Idaho native, noted, "Boise is a key market for us and is central to our expansion through the western states. We are excited to be investing in this vibrant community. It feels like coming home."
